Any student may be exempt whose parent/guardian objects on religious grounds if:

1. The student shows no evidence of illness.
2. The parent/guardian states in writing that to the best of their knowledge the student is in good health and free of communicable disease.

Every student shall, prior to entry, furnish a certificate from a licensed physician or health department official certifying that the student has those immunizations required by law. Any student may be exempt whose parent/guardian objects on the grounds that the administration of the immunizing agents conflicts with their religious tenets or practices, unless the State Board of Health has declared an emergency or epidemic. To do so, the parent or guardian must furnish the school with a notarized statement of the parent's or guardian's objections. Any student may be exempt if the immunization would be detrimental to their health. In that case, the student's physician must submit a written statement that the administration of the immunizing agents would be detrimental to the health of the student.
