Department	Instructional Services
Description of Need	As some students need language arts intervention support, a professional development tool is needed for teachers to identify weakness in literacy skills to aid them in providing targeted support to students in areas of needed improvement.
Background Information	Literacy learning loss was identified in the student population following the 2020 Covid-19 pandemic. FCPS needs professional learning opportunities that provide teachers an in-depth study around early language and literacy development which teaches the skills that are needed for students to master language and literacy foundations. Lexia Learning Systems service, LETRS® gives instructors the opportunities to collaborate with colleagues, engage in interactive online learning, and practice this new learning method in the classroom with students. Initially, the Department of Instructional Services (ISD) invested in facilitator training to certify a cohort of FCPS educators. These trained facilitators will now lead internal LETRS® professional development sessions, with ISD providing the necessary training materials in subsequent years.

The Department of Instructional Services intends to purchase LETRS® educator training material at existing pricing as it is not impacted by the price increase.
