Department	Department of Special Services
Description of Need	FCPS requires a Social and Emotional Learning (SEL) Universal Screener to systematically assess and monitor how well FCPS schools are helping students to develop skills including achieving goals, understanding and managing emotions, establishing and maintaining relationships with adults and peers, and making responsible decisions. Students also share how successful their school and community are at making them feel valued, included, and supported. These factors are critical to positive academic, social, and emotional success.
Background Information	The availability of consistent, divisionwide SEL data enables staff to make informed decisions regarding resource allocation, program effectiveness, and targeted support at the student, school, and division levels. Without a universal screening mechanism, the division's ability to proactively identify needs, monitor trends over time, and support student well-being in alignment with strategic priorities would be significantly limited. A standardized, research-based screening tool is necessary to identify students who may need additional social-emotional or mental health supports and to provide actionable data to inform school-based interventions. Individual student results are reviewed alongside other information to plan interventions for students with identified needs across all tiers.
